After selling out previews at Oval House and the Arts Council's Decibel showcase in Manchester last year, this creative collision of cabaret, live art and film conceived by award-winning director Nathan Evans returns to London for a limited run at Soho Theatre Downstairs before setting off to Suffolk for the Latitude Festival.

The show features performances by Avant Guardian Angel David Hoyle, the reigning Alternative Miss World Fancy Chance and Eco Worrier Extraordinaire Timberlina, each of whom has just fourteen minutes in which to save the planet. All performances have been developed and directed by Nathan Evans in collaboration with the artists and the support of Arts Council England. The show, which also features cinematic entr'actes created with Theatrical Radical Bette Bourne and Video Anti-Hero Kate Pelling, has been described by The Erotic Review as 'fast-paced, thought-provoking and extremely entertaining' and 'a happy dose of queer cabaret' by The Guardian; it serves up serious subjects such as ecology, spirituality and politics with a shot of anarchic humour and a dash of radical glamour.

Nathan Evans says, "I came up with the idea for this project when I discovered the TED Talks, which challenge the world's 'inspired thinkers' give the 'talk of their lives' in eighteen minutes. I was seeking a way to give artists a guiding time frame and concept to produce a performance when Dale Arden's voice popped into my head hollering 'Flash! I love you but we only have fourteen hours to save the earth!' and I had it..." Nathan has been challenged to create his own fourteen minute performance for Latitude and will be creating further performances with other artists as the project develops.

Nathan Evans is a writer, director, producer and performer whose work in cabaret, theatre and film has been funded by the Arts Council, toured by the British Council, broadcast on Channel 4, archived by the British Film Institute, awarded a few statuettes and presented at venues across the planet.
